

- Predict the role of science and technology in future

In the future, science and technology will make computers better for everyone. At home, computers will be easier to use and do more cool things. They will become part of everyday life, helping people with their daily tasks.

In schools, science and technology will change the way we learn. Computers will be like helpful friends, making learning more fun and tailored to each student. We might play and learn on computers, making it easier to understand difficult things.

Talking about brain drain, which is when smart people leave their own countries, technology might help stop this. As technology grows, people might want to stay in their home countries because they can find good jobs and opportunities there. It's like a magnet pulling people back.

So, in the future, computers will be super helpful at home and in schools. They will change the way we learn and make life easier. Also, smart people might decide to stay in their home countries because of better opportunities, thanks to technology. This could make the world a more fair and balanced place.

- Talk about list of inventions that you use often

Let's talk about inventions that have slowly become part of our daily lives. Starting with the bicycle, a simple means of personal transportation, it not only promotes physical well-being but also contributes to environment.

Next in line is the phone, a handy communication device. This portable machine helps our constant connectivity with friends and family, enhancing relationships. Computers embodiment of efficiency. It is hard to say where humanity would be without computers. From calculating, complex engineering to artificial intelligence, computers can do it all.

The lightbulb is a magical thing. When you flip the switch, it brings brightness to the room, making everything easy to see. It's like a tiny sun, helping us do things even when it's dark outside. The lightbulb is a bright idea that makes our spaces cozy and lets us get things done, day or night.

A television is an electronic device that displays moving. one can access a variety of shows, movies, and programs. It serves as a source of entertainment, providing visual and musical content for everyone. The television is a versatile medium through which information, stories, and events are transmitted, enhancing the overall viewing experience in the comfort of one's home.